THE WAR IN MEXICO. Napoteon Inclined to Negotiate.

There have been rumors for some days past. It was the impression at first aloot, involving no less than the removal of the that it is contemplated to recome negotiations with the Mexican government after the capture of Puebla. It is undertable that the results of the campaign have sadly disappointed the Emperor, and caused much discontent, which is not confined to civilian -- The worst of it is that here is no certainty of doing much hetter within a reasonable time. The execuation of Tampleo as of Jalspa, and particularly the former, was a measure imposed by necessity. Every one, not excepting the French, is heartily sick of the whole affair.
